The Atlanta Auto Show is a sure sign of summer, but most of us can't go outside without the city getting all hot and sticky. Today, Pontiac is introducing the 2016 Pontiac Torrent, a Gran Turismo, for the mass market. With a new exterior, a new interior, and a new engine, this car is another addition to our list of trending cars. A word of warning: I will be using a lot of GIFs here to help you get the gist of what I'm trying to convey. Okay, first up, the outside. The Torrent is a beauty. Although it shares its sheetmetal with other recent Pontiacs such as the G8 and Astra, it does sports a blacker-than-black finish that's accented with gloss black. The roofline is more curvaceous, and the rear has a muscular look as well. It's definitely a car you'll want to throw in a mix of other pieces. The bumper looks quite aggressive, and the front end is quite handsome as well. This isn't a conservative, boring vehicle. All-wheel drive isn't used, but the car has a six-speed automatic that should be able to provide good steering feel and will most likely be set up for off-road use. Here's what the 2016 Torrent will look like. Next, the interior. Like most Pontiacs, the Torrent's interior is very handsome, with high-quality materials and an overall attractive look. It's also quite roomy. The seats are comfortable, and although there isn't a lot of headroom, there's lots of legroom. Speaking of which, the backseat is roomy as well. There are also two trays, one in the center console, and one under the shifter. The outside of the interior is covered in a soft-touch plastic, and the instrument display is red rather than black. Finally, in terms of power, the 2016 Torrent is powered by a 1.8-liter four-cylinder engine, turbocharged and mated to an eight-speed automatic transmission. This means that not only is it a world-class engineering project, but it gets a new engine that should provide good performance.
